FEEDING PEOPLE WELL

2022 ANNUAL REPORT

Jim with Juan Saavedra, production supervisor at UniSea in Redmond, WA

JIM HARMON, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends,

In the 20+ years I've worked at SeaShare, I've never seen a year like 2022. We faced unique challenges on every front. I am grateful that long-term partners like the Pacific Seafood Processors Association and the At-Sea Processors Association maintained their donation programs – they kept us going for much of the year. Generous grants enabled us to access additional volumes, especially in the 4th quarter.

As you review this year's report, I hope you recognize that it was a combination of seafood donors and financial support that generated over 4 million seafood servings in 2022.

After three years of covid, conflicts, and inflation, we aren't sure what the new normal will be; but food prices will remain high for the foreseeable future. The paradigm for hunger relief is changing.

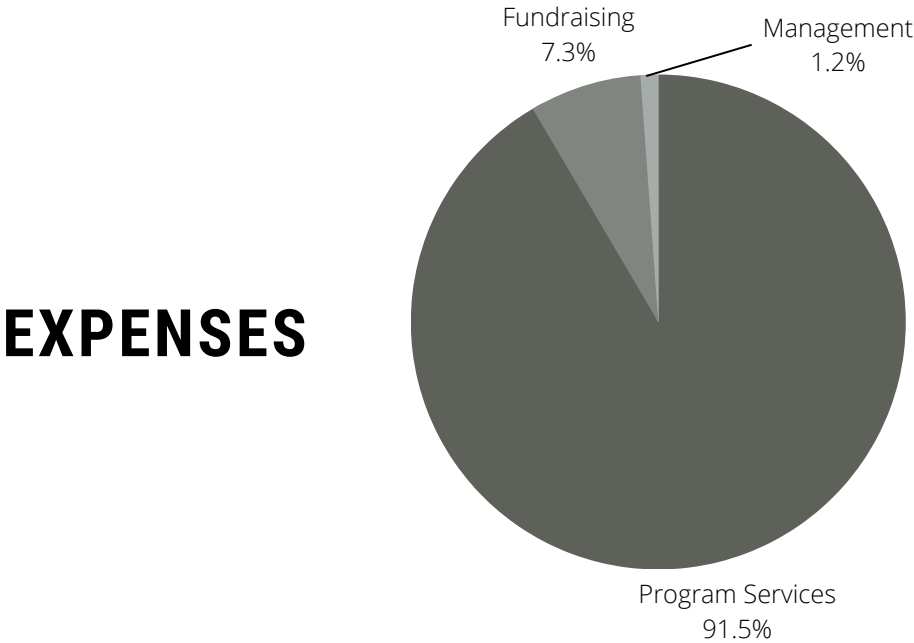

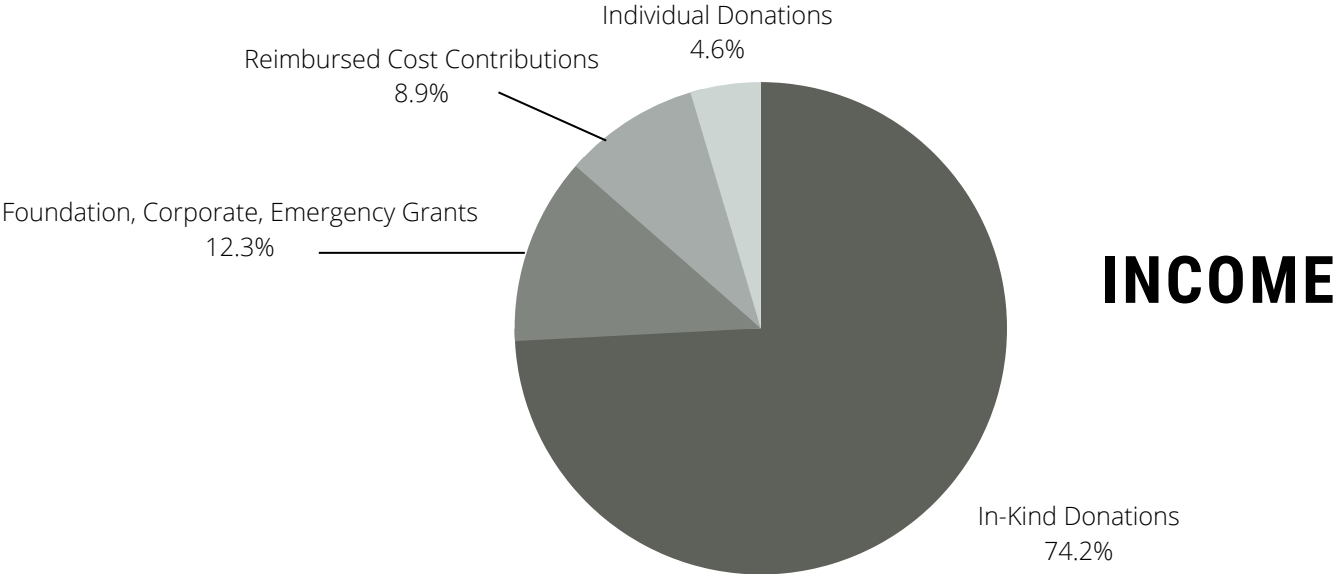

One thing was constant — our seafood partners remained generous. But it took more than their philanthropy to generate truckloads of healthy protein for those facing food insecurity. SeaShare's ability to provide seafood to food banks also depends on financial support. We evaluated donation opportunities throughout the year and acted on those that maximized results with available funding.

When it comes to distributing food, SeaShare has relied on Feeding America's national network of food banks since the beginning. They safely and efficiently distribute our seafood donations — doing the hard work, every day, to feed hungry families across the country.

The results you read in this report reflect the incredible commitment that all our partners made in 2022 to feed more seafood to more people. Despite the challenges, you should be proud of the results you helped us achieve. Please call or email if you have ideas for new collaborations.

With gratitude,

NATIONAL DISTRIBUTION

SeaShare works with partners across the country to ensure food banks and feeding centers have the seafood they need to feed hungry friends and neighbors. We distributed seafood to 16 states in 2022 (see below).

Our seafood distribution in Alaska is supported by five freezers that small communities in remote areas rely on for a year-round supply of seafood.

- Southeast Alaska Food Bank, Juneau, AK
- Salvation Army, Kodiak, AK
- Lions Club Food Bank, Bethel, AK
- Aleut Community of St. Paul, AK
- BBNA Food Bank, Dillingham, AK
