JIM HARMON, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Friends,

We are pleased to publish the collective results of our work for you. This report represents the combined efforts of so many individuals who share a common goal: Feeding more seafood to more people.

Much of our donation volume comes from the Bering Sea and Gulf of Alaska, where we saw changes to fishing, to fisheries management, and to seafood markets. Inventory and freight costs increased, which created some donation opportunities. Current markets also tied up a lot of volume that could have been donated. SeaShare's Board kept us on top of the various opportunities, and the results can be seen throughout this report.

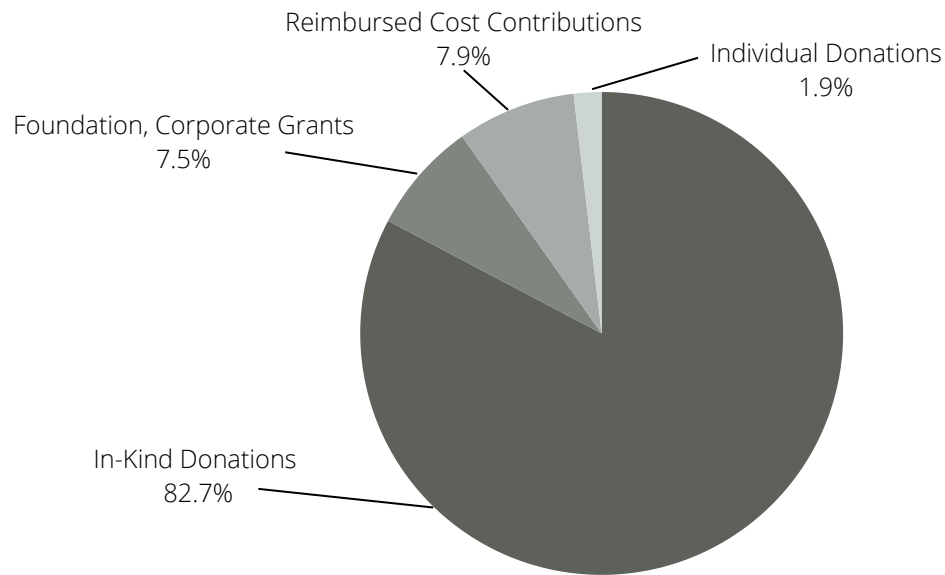

Speaking of the board, we were saddened by the loss of our Board President, Bill Orr. Bill was a mentor and friend to me, and I had the pleasure of working with him since 1993, long before either of us joined SeaShare. He is greatly missed, but the rest of our board is filling the void. Rasmus Soerensen of American Seafoods has taken the reins as President, and he is the right person at the right time. We also recruited new board members Tom Zaffiro of Channel Fish and Analise Gonzales of Trident Seafoods. They join the rest of our seafood executives who are passionate about seafood and helping others. I appreciate the opportunity to work with all of them.

Some of our seafood came from finished inventories and planned production this year. We were able to use additional funding to access donations that weren't available at zero cost. That seems to be the trend for hunger relief. Feeding America and their food banks are applying dollars strategically for key items that improve the nutritional value for their clients. While costs have increased, our seafood still represents one of the best values in the supply chain. SeaShare's top-tier protein still averages less than 20 cents per serving.

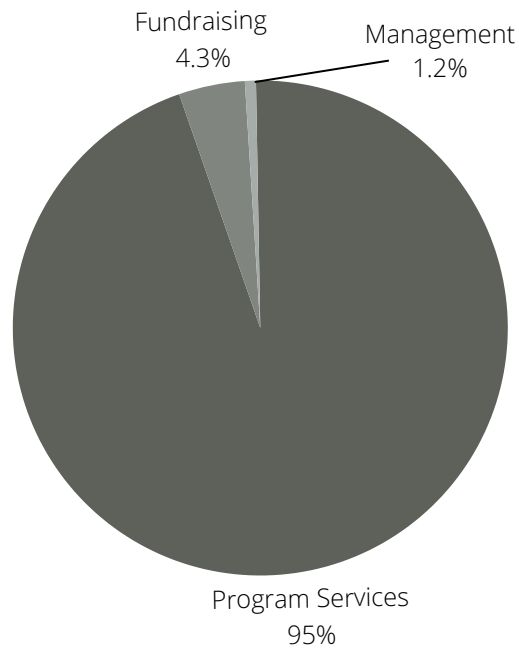

Fishermen and processors adjusted to myriad variables in 2023. The one constant was their commitment to helping others who need a good meal. I am proud to work with so many talented, generous people — combining their donations with other services, and additional funding to reach maximum results. Thank you for pulling on the oar with us.

With gratitude,
